

I write to ask you to thoughtfully consider denying the request from the Citizens Banking Association that would weaken my state's no-call law. Here in Wisconsin, the number-1 consumer complaint has to do with telemarketing/telemarketers. Our law works well because it gives power to consumers--power to tell telemarketers to find somebody else to talk to. I won't try to convince you that my life was a train wreck before the Wisconsin no-call law went into effect.

But I promise you that since that time, my life is much more pleasant than it was before. I ask you to empower the consumer, and leave the Wisconsin no-call law as it is. Thank you for your serious consideration of this issue, and your attention to my comments.
